A detailed topographic map of a region in southern Utah, primarily within San Juan and San Petre counties. A prominent red line, likely representing a boundary or route, winds through the landscape. The map features numerous towns and settlements, including Tropic, Hatch, Blanding, and Bluff. Major roads are shown with route numbers in red and black. The terrain is rugged, with many mountains and valleys. Key geographical features include the San Juan River, the San Petre River, and several reservoirs. The map also shows the locations of national forests and other protected areas. The overall color scheme is typical of topographic maps, with greens for vegetation, browns for elevation, and blues for water.
